SAN FRANCISCO, September 18 .--Cable advices from Fanning Island announce that the British steamship Acon, which was long missing, having land's deposits at $15,000,000. sailed from this port on the sixth of July for Auckland and Sydney, via Tutuila, Samoa, is ashore on Christmas Island and that her passengers and all hands are safe. The island is situated in south latitude 10 degrees 25 minutes, east longitude 105 degrees 42 minutes. Its discovery, dating from the Challenger expedition, cost the British Government $1,500,000. The expedition was the means of adding Christmas Island to the British Crown. After the island was annexed a ninety-nine-year lease was granted Dr. John Murray and Mr. Clunies Ross, jointly, at a yearly rental of $750. The island is about ten miles long and seven broad, with an area of forty to fifty square miles. The island rises out of waters deeper than those which surround any other tropical island. Down to the water's edge the island is covered with a heavy vegetation. The plateau is one long succession of phosphate blocks, varying in depth down to forty feet.

The lack of anchorage was finally overcome and Flying Fish Bay now af-

K. S. S., ar America may be a very free country, Yet England is practically the one NUUANU, Am. bk., Jocelyn, sailed, country in the world where everything from trade to speech is free. We have had little trouble during the last twenty years from agitators. Arrests have been few though probably more numerous than the public is aware. We don't publish the fact every time we conduct an anarchist or some alien troublemaker to a steamship. The suffragettes and unemployed? Oh, yes, they have of late given the authorities some bother. But, mind you, the arrest of the suffragettes and of Jack Williams and a few of his unemployed pals has not been for any other reason than that they refused to move along for the public good. The duties of the police on such occasions are to prevent crime, to keep the peace and to see that all the public's rights are preserved. So long as the corns of the public are not trodden on, and this includes such things as the undue stoppage of traffic, then the police do not act. Our system has worked successfully in this country for twenty years or more. How have other countries fared?"

> There are many more anarchists in England today than there have been in past years. The strict police regulations of other countries have driven them here. But while they are not interfered with in England so long as they behave themselves, their identity, address, mode of life and plans are known to the detectives who form the special branch. In London there are many groups, which are divided up into three districts of the big city. There is the East end district, Soho, and Tottenham court road district. It is in the latter district that the most important group is established. It is called the Freedom group from the monthly paper of that name which it publishes. In Soho are to be found the French, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese groups. In the East end the Russian and Jewish groups live. The total anarchist membership in London is more than 4000. There are also groups in the larger of the provincial towns and cities, such as Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Sheffield, Leeds, Edinburgh.

The police know them all and the country police have special men who work in conjunction with the special the turbulent element. If any one ments are most elaborate. They have the assistance of all other countries and when an anarchist starts traveling the police at his destination are informed and the man is at the port of entry or at the railroad depot identified and shadowed. So exhaustive has been the work in this connection that I am told semiofficially and with much condence that there is not a single group of anarchists in this country which does not number in its membership one or more police informants.
